After a series of ecological disasters and a great war, the nation of Panem has risen "out of the ashes" of what was once North America. Panem, composed of a decadent Capitol ringed by 12 impoverished districts, has evolved into a brutal dictatorship. The districts provide all necessary resources for the country, and the Capitol demonstrates its power over its citizens by forcing each district to send two children each year to compete in a televised death match called the Hunger Games.

The Hunger Games is a criticism of violence and the ruthlessness of a totalitarian government. This is illustrated in the scene where Haymitch watches miserably as he watches two children engaging in a mock battle. The scene begins with several shots of a board showing the odds that each tribute has of winning The Hunger Games.
